

Stay healthy!

What should we know about masks?

- Wearing a mask is not mandatory in Estonia, but in certain situations it is recommended to protect your own health and the health of others.
- Wearing a mask does not guarantee that the virus does not spread from one person to another, but it reduces the likelihood of spreading. This is especially true when the mask is worn by a person who has been infected with the virus and who is not yet showing any symptoms.
- Covering mouth and nose in populated indoor areas always reduces the risk of the virus.
- One person's freedom not to wear a mask does not reduce the freedom of another person to wear a mask and vice versa. We need to be respectful towards anyone who is prepared to wear a mask to protect themselves and the others.
- Wearing a mask is an additional protection. The main thing we can do to prevent the spread of the virus is to stay at home when sick, follow the hygiene rules and avoid close contact with unknown people.

Wearing a mask is highly recommended

- When meeting persons at social events (both indoors and outdoors) who are over 65 years old and/or have chronic diseases (e.g. weak lungs, asthma, diabetes, liver disease, kidney disease, heart disease) or have otherwise weak health.

Wearing a mask is recommended when

- When spending time outside in busy public places (including shops, pharmacies, health care institutions, public transport stations and terminals).
- When using public transport (including trains, buses, trams, trolleys).
- When meeting unknown people indoors at crowded public events.
- When visiting family members or friends in hospitals or care homes. Since viruses are very dangerous for people in a weakened state, the hospital or nursing home may be made compulsory to wear a mask with an appropriate level of protection. In this case they also ensure the presence of mask on the spot.
- When you are older than 65 years of age and/or suffer from chronic diseases. In this case, it would be preferred to stay within a company of family and friends and avoid indoor and outdoor gatherings with other unfamiliar elderly people, or people with chronic diseases.

Wearing a mask is usually not necessary

- When spending time outdoors, at home or in usual daily situations where we meet with people who we see often.
- Children under the age of 10.
